"We are pleased to announce Zambian artist Gladys Kalichini as the winner of the Henrike Grohs Art Award 2022. Her multidisciplinary research-based practice really caught our attention. Through video, sculpture, and installation, Kalichini offers a melancholic meditation on Zambia's colonial and postcolonial histories, addressing such themes as trauma and death. Her approach to the archive as a space of enunciation shines a critical light on acts of omission or erasure of women's contributions to Zambia's political history and, her ethnography on the spaces occupied by women in contemporary Zambia is a brilliant contribution.

The award will spur Gladys to continue to push her exacting and boundary-defying practice in interesting directions and could serve as a spark in energizing the art scene in her home country of Zambia" said the jury, made up of Ugochukwu-Smooth C. Nzewi, Serubiri Moses and Princess Marilyn Douala Manga Bell.

Johannes Ebert, Secretary-General of the Goethe-Institut, notes: “The prize highlights and recognises the fact that working conditions for aspiring professional artists do in fact represent a challenge. This is all the more true during a global pandemic that itself hampers exchange and networking within the continent. At the same time, it also limits the international visibility that is so important for artists. The prize offers just such visibility to rising talents, and creates a platform to showcase the diversity of contemporary African art.”

Gladys Kalichini is a contemporary visual artist and researcher from Lusaka, Zambia. Her work centres around notions of erasure, memory, and representations and visibilities of women in colonial resistance histories.

Va-Bene Elikem Fiatsi from Ghana and Temitayo Ogunbiyi from Nigeria were selected as runners-up of the Henrike Grohs Art Award and will each receive a cash prize of €5,000.
