

Vodacom In The City

"Jo'burg a-r-e you ready?" screeched spirited front-woman Skin to a sea of 11,000 indie rockers at Friday's Vodacom In the City in downtown Jo'burg's Mary Fitzgerald Square. As Cass' bass-beat pulsed through the bodies of the sweat-streaked fans, the air was filled with thousands of cellphones held up to capture Skunk Anansie's long-awaited return to South Africa. As the unofficial headline act of the evening, they thrilled the crowds with Skin's crowd surfing, cementing the iconic British band's performance as one of the best ever seen in SA.

The whole vibe of the festival was electric! As the only local act on the line up, Al Bairre played an outstanding opening set, so it's no surprise that they'd won the Vodacom 'Open the City' competition that saw over 18,500 votes from the public.

Recognised as one of the edgiest and most anticipated music events on the South African calendar, Vodacom In the City 2013 has taken Jo'burg festivals to the next level. Keep your eye on facebook.com/InTheCityJHB for all the 2014 line-up.
