

Lifti is becoming a way of life

Have you heard about the latest convenient transport solution for commuters in Mzansi?

It's the answer for an early-rising millennial who wakes up in the morning to prove they're worthy of a seat at the corporate table. It's one of the latest options for Generation Y youngsters hustling in the big city for their big break. It's the remedy to long queues waiting for public transport. The way forward exists in a new mobile app known as Lifti.

Lifti has turned on the ignition key for improved mobility with its tech-savvy transport solution for a new generation of South Africans, offering affordable and convenient ways to travel. It provides a new way of getting to work, going on holiday or living your best life through a shared ride.

The app has recently been honoured with the Smarter Mobility Africa Award for providing a mobility solution that will help alleviate some of the transport challenges commuters face.

Even if you own your own vehicle, you can benefit from Lifti – it can help you pay off your car, save on fuel costs and be more spontaneous to go on road trips with people willing to split the petrol bill.

We all know that taxi maths can seem like rocket science the moment your cab fare has five bob extra. Do you want a way to get around without paying more? Use Lifti and cough up coins that make cents and sense.

Lifti also cares for your safety – and it goes the extra mile, making sure all its drivers and passengers are verified using their identity documents. This allows you to travel with peace of mind, knowing that you will reach your destination. The app allows you to ride with commuters of your choice based on your preferences and easily sends and tracks your location.

So, if you've got the will, Lifti will definitely get you on your way. It shifts the concept of lift clubs to a whole new gear and lets you get around how you want to be driven, regardless of whether you want to roll out in a simple starter pack or in a VrrPha.

How it works

To find a ride, passengers enter their desired pickup and drop-off locations. They then receive suggestions for possible matches travelling in the same direction at the same or similar times and select who they would like to ride with.

Passengers can choose between once-off and recurring trips. They can also send a message with pickup instructions. Once passengers arrive safely at their destination, they pay the driver securely via the app and provide a rating. The driver can also rate their passengers.

The app has also partnered with KIA Motors to promote the benefits of shared mobility, launching the partnership in Transport Month.

“KIA is an automotive company that not only supports start-ups like Lifti, but also cares about how people move from point A to B,” says Lifti co-founder and owner Tshepo Seeletso.

“They want to help people who may not have cars today to get to work without hassles, while they save money to become KIA customers in the future,” he adds.

“For KIA, this is for a bigger cause than profit,” says Lifti chief operations officer and co-founder Tshepo Rox Sikwane, “The company wants to support the underserved segment of people who can benefit from this partnership between KIA and Lifti, helping commuters keep a bigger percentage of their salaries in their pockets and saving money on transport.”

Simply register an account and seamlessly move between being a driver or passenger.
