

Arterial Network launches new website

Arterial Network has launched its redesigned website, actualising its mission in becoming a leading source of information and exchange for the African creative sector and its diaspora.

Arterial Network's new web-platform aims to revolutionise the way members and partner organisations communicate about their activities and projects, becoming a true forum for the African creative sector while showcasing the nature and scope of the organisation's endeavors.

Users will be able to find new features such as "The Network", an interactive map where members and local partners will be profiled with updates on their activities, events and partnerships; the "Artwatch Africa" page will provide the latest news on censorship, cultural and artistic rights and our various workshops ran across the continent with human rights practitioners; the "Opportunities" page will be constantly updated with vacancies, residencies, call for papers, awards and conferences and the "Publications" page will have Arterial Network's toolkits downloadable for free, as well as its partners' latest research and a vast array of useful resources for cultural practitioners.

With this new website and through the dissemination of pertinent information, relevant research, a stronger defense and monitoring of infringements made to freedom of creation and creative expression, Arterial Network sets the pace for sustained action for the African creative sector.
