

M&G Online launches election survival guide

As South African political parties' election campaigns gather momentum, the question for the voter remains: who's going to get my vote? Earlier this week the Mail & Guardian Online launched its special elections report to help illuminate the current political scene.

Carlos Henriques, GM of Mail & Guardian Online, says "Watch out for our Vote Predictor, which should go some way to helping you navigate through the minefield of South African politics. Fill out the short questionnaire and we'll mail you the results, which you can then print out and keep so you don't forget on the way to the polling station".

There are also interactive maps, polls, and an M&G Twitter feed and some of the M&G's top Thought Leader bloggers will provide a different perspective on the polls.

The special report can be found at <http://elections.mg.co.za>, as well as a mix of the latest news, comment and analysis.
