

Bonobo Live with 8 piece band to perform at Kirstenbosch

British musician and producer Simon Green also known as DJ Bonobo will perform at the Kirstenbosch National Botanical Garden in Cape Town on 8 February 2019. He will be accompanied by his eight-piece band for a one-night live show.

Bonobo's rise has been stealthy but unstoppable, and Green, the man behind it all, is now one of the biggest electronic artists of our time. He initially debuted years back with a trip-hop aesthetic, and since ventured into more of an upbeat approach while experimenting with jazz and world music.

His 2017 Migration album is his sixth body of work and biggest yet, achieving a top five chart position in the UK and nominated for Best Dance/Electronic album at the 60th Annual Grammy Awards cementing his breakthrough in the US. The Migration album also won the Album of the Year at the 2017 Electronic Music Awards – and to top it all off, Bonobo was nominated for Live Act of the Year at the awards show. The album's track Bambro Koyo Ganda was also nominated for the Best Dance Recording at the Grammys of that year.

Green's work has amassed a cult following around the globe, collaborating with various musical heavyweights solidifying his presence on the electronic music scene.

Tickets cost R565 and will go on sale on 4 October 2018 via Webtickets.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>