Evolving and learning something new every day has become synonymous with Rocket Creative's approach as a business.

Due to the ever-evolving trends of the design industry, Rocket Creative flourishes on this change. Whether it be a new piece of hardware or software, a new production tool, a newly available material or substrate, or just an improved way to up-spec their product and/or up-skill their crew, the Rocket Creative crew thrives on being challenged daily.

In line with this perpetual process, refreshing the Rocket Creative brand in itself is something the business enjoys doing on a regular basis. Says Richard Nilson, founder and current MD of Rocket Creative, "We derive great joy out of refreshing our identity as for us it signifies our next business chapter and a revitalised, even more professional approach. Not only an aesthetic upgrade, we have timed our latest CI refreshment to coincide with a totally refreshed website platform which presents our product options and their specifications in a far more informative manner."

He adds, "The company has managed to develop such an extensive range of product across a diverse number of industry categories that conveying the product offering became a massive task in itself. This improved platform delivers the relevant product specifications and images fully, thereby allowing clientele to make immediate decisions as to which of our product options to choose for their applications. Being able to convey all of our range and product information to new and prospective clients in the shortest possible time frame and with the least amount of effort on their part was the primary objective."
