The 2015 year has been a bit of a blur (an epic blur) for the Rocket Creative crew, and the final 'silly season' push is just as manic as it always seems to catch some clients unawares despite all best intentions to schedule as much as possible.

The Rocket Creative crew is working furiously to finish up for the year and have scheduled to close for business on Tuesday, 15 December, for a well-earned vacation, and shall re-open for trading on Thursday, 7 January 2016.

Richard Nilson, Rocket Creatives' founder and MD reflects on their 2015 year, "Against all current downturn trends in the industry we are blessed to have experienced significant growth over the last two-three year period. We are immensely privileged to say that our recent portfolio of work looks like a Who's Who list of South Africa's blue chip brands. We are truly honoured to work with many of South Africa's top brands and agencies and our constant high quality of client service, coupled with innovative creativity through to final end-point delivery allows us to earn our status as one of many clients' top ranking suppliers. This is a label we are truly honoured with, but we do work incredibly hard for it and do our utmost to ensure our clients feel that we earn it daily through every well-delivered project."

The images below of recent projects and products illustrates the extent and depth of the crews creativity and capabilities, as well as the calibre of the blue chip brands they service.

Rocket Creative is intensely invested in both their clientele and the industry. This allows their team to skilfully identify opportunities and to generate innovative products on the fly. This has led to their standard ranges of products flourishing on a month to month basis and one of their biggest challenges is conveying these new releases and extent of our ranges to the industry.

Richard elaborates further, "The Rocket Creative crew is acutely aware of how critical our clients are to us and the demands placed on them. Our business is a 100% visual, results driven business and we focus on providing a first-world product and service experience. In todays' times where the stresses of merely living in South Africa are challenging enough, we strive to evolve and improve our offering daily to be as reliable, dependable and engaging as possible to deal with. With the solid relationships we have developed and nurtured throughout the last few years where we have shown such phenomenal growth, the Rocket Creative crew are impatiently looking ahead to 2016"
