

Corona Free Range Fund offers South Africans a chance to star on its series

Corona Free Range Fund is calling on South Africans to enter and stand a chance of being featured in season two of Free Range Humans. This follows the success of season one, which featured two South Africans out of a cast of eight, chosen from over 500 entries from around the world.

The series aims to identify individuals globally who have taken the leap fully from their original routines into their passion projects, and find meaning in their lives outside. Click here to learn more and submit your entry.
