

SA's entertainment industry is finding novel ways to stay afloat amid the escalation of Covid-19

By  Tecla Ciofi

26 Mar 2020

Our entertainment industry is nothing if not resilient, Texx and the City's editor Tecla Ciofi takes a look at some of the ways musicians are rising to the occasion as Covid-19 takes root in SA...

As South Africa heads into a 21-day lockdown, the future for many is uncertain. The future for those who work in the entertainment industry, however, seems catastrophic, owing mainly to the fact that most survive on a month-to-month income.

Tecla Ciofi - © Alet Pretorius

Venue-wise, things look bleak. Cape Town's bastion of live music, Mercury Live, became the first casualty of this pandemic, as the iconic 20-odd-year-old venue closed its doors last week because they couldn't afford to stay afloat. And that happened before our lockdown. A total of 21 days of no income for any business big or small is no laughing matter – for the functionality of a venue, but also, for every single staff member who works there.

Musician-wise, the situation is no-better. Festivals have been postponed or cancelled, tours have been called off and, just like that, the lifeblood of the professional musician disappears.

But it's not all doom and gloom.

#BizTrends2020: From the rise of independent artists to the age of TikTok

Tecla Ciolfi · 13 Jan 2020

On Saturday, singer-songwriter Arno Carstens joined forces with Webtickets to host an overwhelmingly successful and slick live stream of his concert on YouTube.

This Friday, live electro group GoodLuck will perform as a part of Global Citizen's #TogetherAtHome series, spearheaded by Chris Martin, and the event will be streamed on Instagram.

GoodLuck included among Chris Martin, John Legend in Global Citizen's #TogetherAtHome concert series

26 Mar 2020

Live streaming is the way of the foreseeable future, I have said this at least 100 times over the last week. With the National Arts Festival the first large-scale event to announce that its 2020 edition will be fully digital, expect many events to explore ways of making this a possibility for them too. It's also exciting to see a whole host of legit platforms and brands come to the party in order to make the option of live streaming a concrete reality.

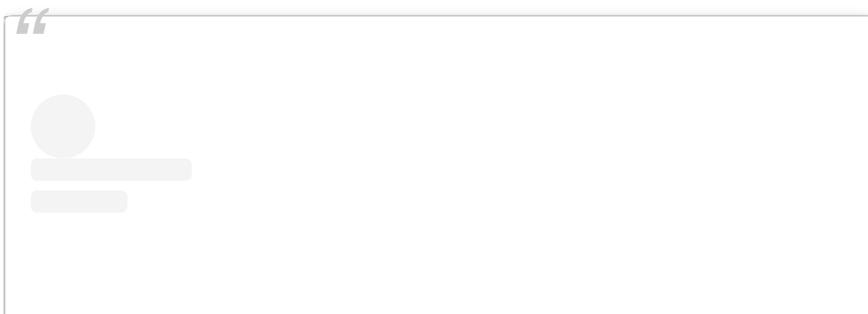

#CoronavirusSA: 2020 National Arts Fest to go virtual

18 Mar 2020

Musician and entrepreneur, Jon Savage, has also come up with a novel way for musicians to earn from their fans while they're live streaming. BUSQR is the world's first live donation solution that allows fans to send contributions via Snapscan to musicians in real time. "Gamers have been doing this for years. BUSQR bring gaming culture to the music industry," explains Savage.

In a project that's a bit leftfield for me, considering that my roots are in entertainment journalism, Texx and the City has joined forces with Nodwin Gaming for 'Bring Back Sports', an online gaming tournament to raise funds for Covid-19 relief. In a relatively short space of time, creative director Glenn Kisela and I amassed some big-name players, musicians and brands – proof that there are corporations out there willing to come to the party. It's uncharted waters but hell, it's exciting.

View this post on Instagram

Covid-19 has already hit our industry hard but that doesn't mean we're down and out. Alongside our partner in crime @g_kayy, we've joined forces with @NodwinGamingZA to showcase the power of gaming and music with an online charity FIFA 20 tournament. More details to be released ASAP.

A post shared by Texx and the City \(@texxandthecity\) on Mar 23, 2020 at 1:49am PDT

This is what we all need to do to survive – think outside the box – because these are strange times that call for novel ways of action.

Just remember to stay safe out there while you're making those money moves.

ABOUT TECLA CIOLFI

Tecla Ciolfi is founder and manager of music news website Texx and the City has been a part of the music industry in South Africa for the last 10 years in various capacities, namely journalism, radio presenting, event curation and artist management.

- #BizTrends2023: Authentic content skyrockets while language barriers crumble - 10 Jan 2023
- #BizTrends2022: SA artists poised to dominate while TikTok still reigns supreme - 5 Jan 2022
- 4 easy ways to help your friendly neighbourhood musician survive Covid-19 - 1 Mar 2021
- #BizTrends2021: A renewed focus on community through exclusive content and livestreaming - 7 Jan 2021
- SA's entertainment industry is finding novel ways to stay afloat amid the escalation of Covid-19 - 26 Mar 2020

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>