

Next-gen Honda Civic Type R teased

Automakers must really despise spy photographers. OEMs try their best to disguise new models in a bid to surprise the public when the official unveiling takes place. But those days are seemingly long gone as more car manufacturers try to control the flow of information regarding their own products. The next-gen Honda Civic Type R is a good example as these images were released by the brand's official Twitter account.

The images were tweeted along with the caption: What's adrenaline-fueled, camouflaged and ready for testing? The new Honda Civic #TypeR! Stay tuned for more thrills. Aside from that caption, there was no info released on the upcoming hot hatch. However, we can spy some info from the pics alone.

Continue reading the full story on Double Apex...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>